Catholic Church Was Struck by Lightning—Barns Burned—Fulton Also Had Cloudburst.

Believed They Are Making Ready to Aid in Coming Revolution in Venezuela.

Evansville, Wis., June 14.—For three hours Saturday evening—from nine until twelve—Evansville and the immediate vicinity was visited by a rain storm that flooded the streets and caused considerable damage. Since 1882, when the rains came, the city has not been so flooded. The streets were flooded with the Saturday evening shoppers when the storm broke and for three hours the merchants were forced to keep open to accommodate the people who sought shelter from the fury of the storm.

Streets Flooded

The streets were raging torrents and at the intersections of Main and Second streets, Church and Madison and the east end of Liberty street it was unsafe to cross and cars in these places were flooded to the depth of four or five feet. In fact, at midnight when the storm abated and people began returning home many gathered at these corners with lanterns to aid persons to cross the streets in safety and view the effects of the storm.

Struck Church

The new Catholic church was struck by lightning but was not damaged. However, persons living in the immediate vicinity suffered from the effects of the shock and Mrs. William Lee, who was outside the door when the flash came, was much affected, but recovered sufficiently to get back into the house. Her son, Edward Lee, who was sleeping in an upper room, was rendered unconscious for over an hour, but was better this morning.

Struck Barns

Several barns and buildings in the town of Porter were struck by lightning. On Ed Ford's farm, five miles from town, the barn was struck and entirely destroyed, together with the grain and hay. The horses were saved and the stock was also rescued. At Will Tolles' farm the barn was struck, but the heavy rain extinguished the flames without much damage to the building.

Shows the Effects

The streets and yards of the city show the effect of the storm even this morning and it will take several days of sunning to dry up the ground. Old residents state that this is the heaviest fall of rain since 1882, when much damage was done, and reports from the farming districts show that crops already in were badly washed.

River Rises

Rock River's sudden rise Sunday morning, in addition to the muddy water, gave to those who watched the stream some inkling of the fact that the heavy clouds and vivid lightning that threatened Janesville Saturday evening had assumed more serious proportions further north. At Fulton the storm assumed almost the proportions of a cloudburst and those Janesville visitors who attended the exercises at the Fulton schoolhouse were considerably alarmed. According to P. H. Korst, manager of the Janesville Electric company, the river rose at least five feet in less than that many hours and a coffee tin which the Janesville Electric Light Company have constructed at Fulton was washed out and the lumber carried down stream.

Swampy Ground City

At Janesville the river rose three times as high as it did during the three days' rain of last week. The storm swept about Janesville in almost a circle, heavy rain falling about six miles north, while a few drops, if any at all, fell in the city.

Caught in the Storm

A Janesville party, consisting of Charles H. Hemminger, John Henderson, and the Misses Rachel Hostwick and Louise Shearer were caught in the storm and prevented from returning to Janesville. They drove Saturday afternoon to Eagle School district No. 3, where they participated in a picnic supper and Supr. Hemminger delivered an address. They then went on to Fulton, where Supr. Hemminger gave another instructive and entertaining talk on "Defenses of Speech." They had proceeded about a mile and a half on the homeward trip when the storm broke and compelled them to turn back. About this time the lightning struck and set fire to a building in Porter and the sky was illuminated for miles around. The ladies in the party were given shelter at O. P. Murwin's farmhouse and the men secured accommodations at William Lee's residence. Mr. Henderson, who was an eye-witness of the damage done to the Fulton dam, states that over $1,000 worth of lumber floated down-stream and that six weeks' labor has been utterly destroyed.

INSANITY DEFENSE OF MURDER CHARGES

W. S. Diggers of Charlotte, N. C., Will Probably Seek Freedom by That Ploy.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Charlotte, N. C., June 14.—No criminal trial here in recent years has attracted more attention than that of W. S. Diggers, whose case is now before the special session of the Mecklenburg superior court. Diggers is charged with the murder of J. G. Hood, both the slayer and his victim were well known citizens of Charlotte.

The killing took place before the Central hotel several months ago, and was witnessed by some 500 people. Without preliminary, Diggers overtook Hood, drew his revolver, fired four shots, and saw his victim fall through the back of the protruding man's head. Diggers then stopped back and surrendered to an officer.

Diggers and Hood were once associated in business. A father followed, and Diggers claimed that Hood had robbed him of his investments. The old grudge had been harbored for several years before the killing. Although nearly a dozen eminent attorneys are engaged for the prosecution and the defense, the probabilities are that an insanity plea will be made for Diggers.

WHEAT-GROWING ON THE DECLINE HERE

Development of Industry Discussed in University of Wisconsin Bulletin.

Madison, Wis., June 14.—An interesting discussion of the "The Rise and Decline of the Wheat Growing Industry in Wisconsin" has been published under the title of a bulletin of the economic series of the University of Wisconsin by John G. Thompson, Ph. D. '07. The fact that Wisconsin is unique among the states of this country for meteoric development and decline of wheat growing, makes a study of the causes of the change of special interest.

The bulletin does not confine itself entirely to the past, but devotes a considerable space to discussion of the future of wheat growing in this state, giving as a reason for the opinion that there will be no considerable revival of the industry in Wisconsin, the fact that the state offers relatively more exclusive advantages for dairying than for wheat growing.

Why Wheat Growing Was Abandoned.

Regardless of the soil in wheat growing by farmer farmers, without any attempt at crop rotation, depleted fertility and increased the cost of production. Hundreds made local rats of the wheat market for many years accounted the unfortunate conditions which led many of the early settlers to move farther west, where there were still quantities of rich, new public lands to be obtained. Many of those who remained in Wisconsin were forced to raise other crops than wheat, in order to renew the fertility of their farms, or to raise stock, and later to adopt dairying, which became the characteristic farm industry of the state.

Dairying Crowded Out Wheat Farming

Dairying led to the renovation of the soil, and to greatly increased values of land, and these conditions reacted still more against the growing of wheat, until the latter industry has been almost entirely driven from the state, the author explains. "Dairying required the exercise of a far more discriminating intelligence and unremitting care than the growing of wheat and afforded a much larger sphere for the application of technical knowledge. The compact organization of the dairy farmers, which the co-operative nature of the industry and the high range of intelligence among the dairymen furthered, afforded telling advantage over wheat growing as a pursuit. Favorable rates for transportation were secured for dairy products and a permanent market insured by the development of a high-grade product of uniform quality. The graded product played a similar though far less important part in the displacement of wheat growing in certain sections of the state, while insect pests and other causes contributed to the same result."

Revival of Big Wheat Farms Unlikely.

A considerable revival of wheat growing—at least according to the extensive method—appears unlikely in Wisconsin, Dr. Thompson declares, "because of the relatively more exclusive advantages for dairying than for the growing of wheat. In accordance with past experience, we may expect a continued movement of the wheat growing areas of the world generally into the relatively less developed regions that are adapted to that crop, until the tendencies that operate toward the equalization of economic conditions between competing areas have worked out their ultimate effects; and such a consideration probably points to a relative decline in the extent of wheat growing within the United States as a whole for an indefinite period in the future."

FLAG UNFURLED OVER THE LAND

TODAY OBSERVED AS FLAG DAY IN UNITED STATES.

FIRST FLAG WAS MADE

By Betsy Ross in Philadelphia And Was Adopted by Continental Congress June 14, 1777.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, D. C., June 14.—Throughout the length and breadth of the United States, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Canadian frontier to the Gulf of Mexico, as well as in the detached American possessions in Alaska, Hawaii, the Philippines, Alaska, Porto Rico, patriotic Americans celebrated today the one hundred and thirty-second anniversary of the American flag, created by act of congress on June 14, 1777. Although not a legal holiday by national consent, Flag day is perhaps more generally and faithfully observed wherever Americans have their homes than any other day in the year, excepting Independence day, the "Glorious Fourth."

For many decades after the adoption of the stars and stripes the celebration of Flag day was principally confined to the official observance of the anniversary by the federal officials throughout the country and occasional celebrations by patriotic societies and patriotic school teachers. But, since the Civil war, which put the loyalty to the stars and stripes to the supreme test, a wave of patriotism swept over the country. The sentiment for the flag of the country grew stronger and with it the desire to honor the symbol of union and freedom by the appropriate observance of its birthday. The various patriotic associations of the country combined their efforts to bring about a more general public observance of Flag day and their efforts have been crowned with gratifying success. In six of the states—Maine, Michigan, Connecticut, Wisconsin, Oregon, and California—Flag day has been proclaimed a legal holiday and there is every reason to believe that other states will imitate this example. On every Flag day, from every federal and other public building and from hundreds of thousands of private buildings and homes, Old Glory was unfurled this morning and everywhere the anniversary of its birth was observed in an appropriate manner by appropriate exercises. It is safe to say that no patriotic organization in the country neglected to honor the birthday of the stars and stripes in no district or other school, even in the remotest parts of the country failed to teach a lesson of national pride and loyalty to the future citizens of the American commonwealth.

The national capital, the birthplace of the honored flag, naturally made special efforts to observe the day appropriately and there were few buildings in any public as well as private, that did not display the stars and stripes of every dimension, from the enormous emblems on the government buildings, to the diminutive flags adding cheer to the otherwise dismal aspect of the cottages of the poor, were displayed in all parts of the city and Pennsylvania avenue, the majestic thoroughfare, leading to the capitol, was a perfect blaze of the national colors. In all the public and private schools exercises were held in commemoration of the flag's birth and the various patriotic organizations, including the U. S. A. R., the Sons of Veterans, the Woman's Relief Corps, the Spanish War Veterans, the Sons of the Revolution and many others, observed the day by holding memorial celebrations with speeches, singing and music.

The American flag of the present day, although unlike the original flag made by Betsy Ross in Philadelphia, in May, 1777, and adopted as the national emblem by congress on June 14, 1777, is merely an elaboration and augmentation of the original. Congress decided, "That the flag of the United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." At first it was decided to add a new stripe and a new star for every new state admitted to the union. But, when the number had reached twenty, congress, in 1818, decided, upon careful deliberation, to adopt the plan suggested by a bill of Representative Peter H. Vanderburgh of New York, and order the flag to be "thirteen horizontal stripes, alternate red and white, with a union of twenty white stars in a blue field." It was also ordered that one star be added for every new state admitted and that the new flag should go into effect on the Fourth of July next following such admission.

The first flag made in Philadelphia was afterward raised on the "Ranger," John Paul Jones' valiant battleship. The first fort on which the stars and stripes were raised was Fort Stanwix, Home, N. Y., and the first battle fought under the stars and stripes was that at Brandywine, September 11, 1777. Before the adoption of the stars and stripes flags on various designs were used by the American patriots. Famous among them were the Massachusetts "Pine Tree," the "Cambridge," the "Tiger," the "Putnam," the "Three Crescent" and the "Moultrie" flags.

A "GOOD MAN,"
WHAT IT MEANS
TERM GENERALLY USED TO COVER MANY DEFECTS.
ST. BARNABAS A MODEL

To Be Really Good, a Man Must Be So, Intrinsically And Externally.

In his sermon at Trinity church yesterday morning, Rev. John McKinley made a scathing attack on the indifference of the majority of the church members of today, those who, after death, are always characterized as "good," and contrasted the work done today with the work done by the early Christian missionaries who, in spite of great natural difficulties, furnished an example of good deeds that no man of the present day has equalled. An example of these early Christian heroes was St. Barnabas, and it was from that part of the New Testament telling of his life that the text was taken, the twenty-third and fourth verses of the eleventh chapter of the Acts of the Holy Apostles: "Who, when he came, and had seen the grace of God, and had exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord. For he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and faith; and much people were added unto the Lord."

"There is a common opinion, held by all, that religion and worship are only for women—not for men. That women and children are fit subjects for worship and religion. Man feels that he is so much stronger that he has no place in his life. It is over there, a false statement made, it is that. Our Lord's religion is not a one-sided thing. It carries a demand on the face of it, for our Lord was a man. It is true that he had the sympathy, affection, gentleness and other qualities that are generally attributed to women, but he also had the higher and more heroic courage and heroisms belonging to man. No one can say that he was a coward, that he was not strong in every particular. What made him so? Was it the fact that he was the Son of God? It was the fact that he was a religious man. He could not have done what he did unless he had been a religious man. What has been said of our Lord applies equally in this day and age. A man can not live a holy life if he is not a religious man. He may be good, and may lead a moral life, but it is not a holy life if he is not religious. This may be said of Socrates and many other heathen philosophers, that they led in many respects a good life, but not a holy life. They may have been moral men, but not good men in the true sense of the term. When a man does nowadays, people pass over all the defects of his life by saying that he was a good man. He may have led a moral, law-abiding life, given liberally to charities, but if he was not a religious man, he entered into the house of God, he lacked the one essential thing, a man mentioned in the text today, 'a man who possessed the qualities that make for a good man.' But there was nothing offensive, nothing weak about him. He was full of the Holy Ghost and faith. He had been a rich man but had given his all, even himself, to the cause of the Lord. He was what can rightly be called a 'good' man. Wherever he is mentioned throughout the chapters of the Acts, we find that he is giving himself without reservation to the one great object of life. This is a remarkable example for all Christian men and women, who instead of giving all, give us little as possible of their time and money to their Lord. Barnabas gave not only all he possessed, but also his life, not for popularity, for the church was despised then and its members persecuted."

"In the history of the church, it was not in the early days alone that the church was despised. We hear men say every day in baptism, or the sacraments, or this, or that. 'Who do you believe in?' They believe in themselves. They go to church more or less regularly, pay their dues and let their religious duties go at that. It was not this way with St. Barnabas, nor with St. Paul, who fought side by side. It is wonderful to think of how much one man accomplished in the early days without any of the modern conveniences, such as the railroad, telegraph, the hard and laborious journeys on foot, the trials, privations, hunger, ridicule, even torture. Then picture what one man did in those early days with what is being done now. What is the reason? It is because we lack what that man had—faith and the Holy Spirit. We are negative men and women. There is so little interest in the church and its works that many members are not even able to find the lessons for the day in the ritual, and are profoundly ignorant of the church service and the church year. This should not be the case, for the church is the means to the end for which every man is placed in the world, and everything else should be subservient to it. But this is not so, for in a majority of cases, the church is subordinate to the pleasures of the world.

"When we say: 'He was a good man,' some things are essential to make this statement true. He should have been a worshipful man—a humble man. Like the Publican in the Temple, he should have said, striking his breast with his hand: 'God be merciful to me, a sinner.' If this is true, he goes from the house of God inspired; the world does not own him, in the putting up of a building, every brick is essential. A church is as strong as its weakest link. So a church or parish is as strong as its weakest member. The church should be made up of good men, full of faith and the Holy Ghost. They should not only be intrinsically good, but outwardly; benevolent and charitable. What makes these good men? The world?"

From this description of the shortcomings of modern Christians as compared with the early apostles, Rev. McKinley went on to dilate further on what the present day church members lacked, and to tell how after performing the nominal duties, they left the bulk of the work to be performed by a few Godly men and women, devoting the greater part of their time to what they consider more important things—clothes, money and jewels. The work of the church was described as being not for the benefit of the door, nor the rector, nor the parish, but for the glory of the Lord. The fact that it is just as hard to be a good Christian now as it was during the early days was brought out, for a careless and the indolence of the early days was the first and most powerful destroyer of the religious life of the first and second of the early days. The only difference is that formerly the dangers were visible, but now they are invisible and more to be feared. The rector then finished with a prophecy of the final triumph of the good at the end of the world, and the solemn warning that God has spoken but once through Jesus Christ and that the warning will not be repeated.

TOMORROW'S MEETING TO DECIDE QUESTION

Up to the Business Men Whether Janesville Celebrates This Year or Not.

At the adjourned mass meeting of citizens to be held in the city hall tomorrow evening the fate of the fourth of July celebration for Janesville is to be settled definitely. It is certain that the celebration of the fourth of July, including the fireworks of the city, the gentlemen who have in the past had charge of the work will make arrangements for the celebration, if this is not accomplished, then the celebration will go by default.

In deference to the good times that Janesville has been able to show the community in the past, several of the towns and cities who have planned celebrations of their own have placed them on July 3, the Saturday before the fourth, while Janesville plans to celebrate on Monday. This will mean that Janesville will in no way conflict with any other celebration in the immediate vicinity.

The Chicago contingent is most anxious to know the fate of the proposed Janesville celebration and promise a good delegation from the Windy City if a celebration is to be held. Minneapolis will also send former residents, and word from Milwaukee is to the effect that there will be a crowd from that city.

The meeting tomorrow evening should be well attended by citizens generally who are interested in the project, as there will be much other business to be attended to if it is decided to have a celebration.

JUST ONE DAY!

How the Coffee Drinker Compromises His Health.

Some people say: "Coffee don't hurt me," and then add: "Anyhow I only drink one cup a day."

If coffee really don't hurt why not drink more? There is but one answer and that is coffee does hurt them and they know it. When they drink it once a day they compromise with their enemy. There are people whom one cup of coffee a day will put in bed, if the habit be continued.

"Although warned by physicians to let coffee alone I have always been so fond of it that I continued to use it," confesses an Ohio lady. "I compromised with my self and drank just one cup every morning until about six weeks ago.

"All the time I was drinking coffee I had heart trouble that grew steadily worse and finally I had such alarming sensations in my head (sometimes causing me to fall down) that I at last took my doctor's advice and quit coffee and began to use Postum in its place.

"The results have been all that the doctor hoped for. I have not only lost my craving for coffee but enjoy my good Postum just as well, but my heart trouble has ceased and I have no more dizzy spells in my head. I feel better in every way and consider myself a very fortunate woman to have found the truth about Postum."

A dam has been placed across the river at that point supplied with an under-shot well which furnishes enough power to light two houses with electricity, irrigate water for household purposes, drive the garden, churn and run feed-enters.

JAMES S. MCGOWAN HAS PASSED AWAY

Old Resident of Janesville Succumbed Saturday Evening to Stroke

James S. McGowan, a resident of Wisconsin for more than three score years, was stricken with paralysis of the left side of his body on Wednesday and died at his home, 1012 Milton avenue, at six o'clock Saturday evening. Deceased was born in the county Fernanagh, Ireland, Nov. 5, 1849, and was the second of four children in the family of Mr. and Mrs. John McGowan.

The latter and their children came to America and settled on a farm near Rochester, New York, removing in 1849 to Dodge county, Wisconsin, where the father, after the fashion of the pioneers, secured a tract of unimproved land, built a log cabin, and converted the wilderness into a farm. There he made his home until he died, in 1887. The mother lived to be ninety years of age, her death occurring in 1889. James S. McGowan was eleven years of age when the family came to this country and was nearly his twentieth year when they removed to this state. He worked on his father's farm, attended district school, and subsequently learned the carpenter and builder's trade. In the spring of 1869 he left home and came to Janesville, where he continuously plied his trade until his retirement from active business. During the past four years he had been engaged in the fruit and bee culture. He was married in 1854 to Miss Mary Louise Bennett, who died on Feb. 13, 1905. The children who survive him are: one son, Attorney Samuel D. McGowan of this city, and one daughter, Mrs. Charles F. Niles of Menomonie, Wis.

The funeral was held from St. Patrick's church at nine o'clock this morning and interment was at Oak Hill cemetery.

Rev. Deon E. E. Rolly conducted the services which were attended by many friends of the deceased. An equally beautiful number of flowers decked the bier of Mr. McGowan. Charles Pierce, C. N. Van Kirk, E. F. Carpenter, Rufus Holsen, Philip Doherty and Leo L. Deers acted as pallbearers.

TRIES TO KILL 3; ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

CAVALRY CORPORAL SHOOTS
CAPTAIN, SERGEANT AND AN-OTHER TROOPER.

URNS WEAPON ON HIMSELF

Capt. Raymond and Assaultant Crabtree May Die from Wounds Inflicted as Result of a Reprimand at Fort Des Moines.

Des Moines, Ia., June 14.—Capt. John C. Raymond, commanding Troop B, United States cavalry at Fort Des Moines; Sergt. James H. Washburn and Corporal Elijah Sule were shot yesterday by Corporal Leslie Crabtree who then attempted suicide. Capt. Raymond was perhaps fatally wounded and Crabtree is not expected to survive the wound inflicted on himself.

Crabtree's injuries are not necessarily fatal, the bullet striking a rib above the heart and crushing the bone. Crabtree had been reprimanded by Capt. Raymond because of his failure to report when his leave of absence had expired. He had spent the night in Des Moines and was to have returned to his barracks at seven a. m.

Demanding a Transfer. Crabtree was summoned by Capt. Raymond and questioned as to his conduct, whereupon the corporal hotly insisted he had leave of absence until seven o'clock last night. Capt. Raymond accepted this explanation and the incident was considered closed when Crabtree demanded that he be transferred to another department of the army, which Capt. Raymond refused to consider, telling the corporal he could not do that as long as he was not a good soldier.

Immediately Crabtree drew a revolver from his pocket and began firing. Sergt. Washburn jumped to his feet and grappled with the soldier receiving a bullet in the hand and one in the jaw which shattered the bone. Capt. Raymond had seized the man's arm and was about to disarm him when a bullet struck him in the neck lodging in the spine and he dropped to the floor paralyzed.

Corporal Shoots Himself. A bullet struck Corp. Sule in the left arm. Crabtree then fired a bullet into his own body.

Capt. Raymond is a son of Brig. Gen. Charles W. Raymond, retired, formerly of the engineers, stationed at New York. His brother is Maj. Robert Raymond of engineers stationed at New York. Capt. Raymond is 38 years old and a member of one of the best-known military families in the east. He was commissioned from Pennsylvania.

UNCLE SAM TO HELP DOGS.

Commerce Commissioner May Make Canine's Traveling Enjoyable.

Washington, June 14.—Tribulations are besetting the dog. As a traveler, while he is not an outcast, he and his owner are subject, on many steam and electric railways, to regulations that amount to cruelties.

It is not unlikely that the interstate commerce commission, in the near future, may be called upon to provide uniform regulations for the carrying of dogs on interstate trains. The rules governing the transportation of dogs are merely what each individual line proposes to make them, and a movement has been begun to bring about uniform regulations that will be fair to passengers and just to the dogs.

Some railroads charge a specified fare for a dog; others transport the dog as baggage; and yet others make no charge, although they differentiate between little dogs and big ones. A few lines permit the owners of "small dogs" to take them into the passenger coaches with them; other lines relegate all dogs to the baggage cars, where they are in danger of being crushed by falling trunks.

KNIGHTS OF ST. JOHN MEET.

Parade for $1,000 Prize Feature of Sandusky Encampment.

The feature of today was a dress parade and drill contest in which many commanderies competed and at which prizes aggregating $1,500 were awarded.

Many visitors are in attendance from the five states represented. The women visitors are being entertained by a committee of 35 prominent young women of this city.

5,000 Persians Reported Slain.

St. Petersburg, June 14.—A dispatch from Ankara says the Shakhsevan tribesmen are ravaging the Ardabil district in Azerbaijan, the most north-westerly province of Persia. According to the dispatch 5,000 persons have been killed and the leading inhabitants have appealed to the Russian consul for protection.

Hill has informed Mayor Jamieson of Calgary that he was rushing the completion of his Hamilton, British Columbia branch with the object of getting a strong foothold on the Rocky Mountain section of Canada and then be able to punch out and tap the prairie provinces.

Carnegie Foundation Refuses Aid—

Wisconsin School, a Model.

New York, June 14.—Harvard, Columbia and New York universities have been warned of laxity concerning standards at the institutions which may violate the requirements for participation in the benefits of the Carnegie foundation for the advancement of teaching.

These facts became known through an interview with John G. Bowman, secretary of the foundation, in which he discussed the recent action of dropping

George Washington University of Washington.

The request of the University of Illinois to be placed on the foundation's list has been denied with that of the University of North Carolina, and for similar reasons. The foundation contends that entrance facilities are too easy and that the advertised standard is not maintained. The University of Wisconsin is held to be the model institution by the foundation.

JURY SAYS CURTIS TOOK HIS OWN LIFE

Coroner's Jury in Court This Afternoon Pronounced Martin G. Curtis a Suicide.

That Martin G. Curtis, who was found dead in his room on the second floor of the Nolan block on Friday morning, June 11, turned on the gas with the express intention of committing suicide, was the verdict of the coroner's jury which met in Justice Stanley D. Tallman's court this afternoon at 1:30. After hearing the testimony of the seven witnesses summoned, the jury was of one mind and brought in a verdict of suicide with practically no discussion.

The first witness called by District Attorney Fisher was Dr. M. A. Cunningham, who together with Dr. George G. Cliftenden, gave the autopsy testimony in regard to the disposition of the body and the length of time Curtis had been dead when the physicians arrived. According to the statements of the doctors, he had been dead between five and six hours. Frank Mohr, the messenger boy who first raised the alarm, W. J. Conroy of the West Side Fire Station and Dick McNeil who were the first to open the door of the dead man's room all concurred in the story with regard to the finding of the body and the condition of the room. Both Conroy and McNeil testified that it was Curtis' habit to have the windows open when he retired and that when they entered the room on Friday morning, both the windows and doors were slightly closed. McNeil well turned off the gas jets, did not notice at that time if they were turned on full or not.

J. O. Meyer, who was next called, had been one of Curtis' most intimate friends and gave some facts about the condition of his mind as well as the condition of his financial affairs, which made more clear the reasons he had for committing suicide. It was brought out that, during the past three years, Curtis had been a changed man, and that in fact, for seven years, since he had left the sales business he had lost both money and friends rapidly. It was a well known fact that he was making a last desperate effort to make his life into a business pay when he took his life.

Chief of Police George Appleby, who took the stand as the final witness, testified that in his opinion Curtis had committed suicide, as it was almost impossible for anyone outside the room to turn on the gas, both because of the weakness of the cotton cord and because of the upward slant of the string. The clothes hook through which the string had been passed had also been taken from the deceased man's closet. After listening to the testimony the six jurors elected as foreman S. Norris and after a few moments' deliberation brought in a verdict of suicide.

The funeral will be held Tuesday morning at 10:30 from the home of M. H. Curtis, 215 South High street.

EDWARD EVERETT HALE

Edward Everett Hale, who died on Thursday, full of years and honor, wrote as follows in the Wall Street Journal on October 1, 1903. His words are still pertinent and were never better worth serious consideration than they are today.

"Let me call your attention to the original difference between the words labor and work. I am sorry to say that in the discussion of today it is more and more overlooked.

"But in our old-fashioned book called the Bible you will find that it is always observed. If you will look in the Century dictionary you will find that it is recognized there.

"The Bible says distinctly that when men die they will come from their 'labors,' while their 'works' will follow them; and the Saviour says, 'My Father worketh hitherto and I work.' I think no one, even now, would dare to say of God that He ever labors.

"Carlyle says: 'Two men I know or no third; first, the toll-worn craftsman.' He does not say the toll-worn laborer.

"I wrote to Powderly when he started the Knights of Labor that there were two difficulties in his title. First, that they were not 'knights,' and second, that they did not care anything about 'labor.' The truth is that the moment we get a day laborer who can contribute nothing we get a day laborer who can contribute nothing but his muscle and weight, as an ox might do, or a mule, we do not respect his labor.

"When you got to the meeting of a lodge and some fellow says that he is also 'a laboring man,' that he labors in his office eleven hours a day and all that, you know that he is a demagogue talking for effect. But if he said he was at work for mankind or for God, why you would listen to him with some sort of sympathy.

"I write rather because I want to enlist you in a great society of two persons, of which you shall be the president and I will be the secretary, who shall work so as to carry back all use of the words work and labor to the use which they would have had, I think in Shakespeare, certainly in the New Testament.

"Work is the using of the matter by spirit, while 'labor' involves mere physical endeavor. I think we should help matters if we could make men understand that civilization consists in having workmen who use their brains instead of laborers who use their bodies.

"Truly Edward Everett Hale rests from his labors. But in this, as in other things, his works do follow him.

THE COST OF GOLF

"Golf is the poor man's game," says Mr. Taft, but that generalization is narrow; for golf is also the game for everybody. It is the one purely athletic sport in which women comes the nearest to holding their own against masculine rivals. We may begin to practice as soon as we are able to walk, while only recently the papers reported the passing, at eighty-two, of a well-known North Dorwick amateur who had played his last round but three days before death. Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Carnegie enjoy their game to the full, but so do the penniless caddies playing at tomato-can holes with cut-off clubs and battered balls. A native-born Norwicher won the amateur championship of New Zealand a year or so ago, contending against a field of white men. Mr. Louis James, while still a schoolboy, became amateur champion of the United States, and Mr. Charles Hutchins won the like honor in Great Britain, although he was well over fifty years of age and a grandfather. In very truth, golf is for all sorts and conditions of men—everybody's game.

This is an extract from an article in Collier's on the game of golf, which is already recognized as a national game. It is of interest to Janesville people because of the local club, which by the way is a temperance resort this year.

The game of golf furnishes the cheapest and most wholesome amusement of all the outdoor sports, and why more Janesville people don't take advantage of it is a mystery.

The club should have at least 100 more active members and it would have if the business and professional men appreciated the opportunities offered.

A stroll over the green is more invigorating than a tonic and the thrill feeling produced is of the health-giving sort, for it lures sleep and wholesome rest. Join the golf club, live long and be happy.

LEVI D. CARLE

In the death of Levi D. Carle the community has lost a man who contributed in full measure to the character and stability of the city which had so long been his home.

For more than half a century his life was devoted to work in the field where he started as a young man to forge out a destiny, and the record of success attained is a tribute to honest effort and untiring perseverance.

Mr. Carle combined, with honesty, rare good judgment and his council and advice was ever wholesome. He was conservative yet liberal in endorsing any enterprise which appealed to him as safe and sound, and men associated with him in business enterprises were impressed with his thoroughness and clear understanding of conditions.

He belonged to the class of businessmen who find their highest pleasure in hard work, and so he found it difficult to play in the years when the encroachments of time weakened vitality and demanded rest.

Mr. Carle was one of the veteran members of the old Methodist church, and later the man who came to the rescue of the Court Street church when the property was about to be sold to satisfy a mortgage.

His religion was of the practical kind and he was ever ready to defend the faith which satisfied him, and which sustained him during the months of weariness and enforced inactivity.

To his friends who were close enough to discover the heart of the man he was ever a chosen companion, for he was a man who bore acquaintance well and his friendship was enduring.

The city has lost a good citizen, and the home a kind and considerate father.

The latest thing in politics is a new party organized at St. Paul to squelch the ambitions of Governor Johnson. The ticket for 1912 is to be La Follette and Bryan. This is supposed to satisfy all breeds of democrats and a variety of republicans, forming an aggregation large enough to stampede the country. The promoters have a large head.

The legislature redeemed itself at the last moment by passing the Owen bill, and while the action was not promulgated it is by far and away the best amendment to the primary law, for it commands party loyalty and compels fair-minded democrats to keep out of the republican camp.

I run a hash bazaar, just up the street; there all my boarders are yelling for meat; boarders

THE carniverous, boarders LANDLADY herbivorous; Allah deliver us! Just watch them eat! Boarders are ravenous, all the world over; "Feed till you spavin us," thus they implore; boarders are gluttonous, roast-beef and muttonous; "Come and unbutton us, so we'll eat more!" Little they pay me for chicken and rice; yet they waggle me for dollops of pie; "bring us eatary birds"—these are their words, bawling like hairy Kurds—"bring them on, ole!" I give them tea and toast, jelly and jam, some kind of stew or roast, codfish or ham; their words are clamorous: "Dime Cup-and-Saucerous, bring us rhinoceros, balled with a yam!" I run a boarding house, as I have said; there Ag and Smiling Youth, raise the Old Ned; maybe the clamorous, knocking and hammering bunch will be stammering, when I am dead!

Inasmuch as the ducky beauty of Georgia Nelson was not seriously injured in the little shaming affair among the colored people at 409 South Washington street last Tuesday night, the authorities decided to give Frank Ward, the assailant, a chance to beat his way out of the city post haste, never again to return, on condition that the case against him be dismissed. # The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

Did it ever occur to you that you always "get by" somehow?

Was there ever a crisis that somehow you didn't manage to surmount? Was there ever a task that you didn't somehow manage to perform? Maybe you didn't do it just as well as you'd like to have, but you did do it.

And when you reached the other side and began to breathe freely again, didn't you say, "Why did I get so worked up over that?"

And yet the very next time you saw a hard hill ahead—the three children taken with the measles right in the middle of housecleaning time—all Cousin John's family proposing to make you a visit just when Daphne would be home from college for her spring vacation and would have to have her spring sewing done—another taken with the grippe just when extra work was piling up at the office—didn't you say, "I don't see how I can possibly get through this next week?"

When I was in school I was continually thinking and saying, "I know I can't pass that examination"—"I know I can't write that essay"—"I cannot possibly make a success of that entertainment"—until one day after I'd safely climbed the hill of one of my impossible hills and stood looking back, it suddenly occurred to me that I always did do all the know-can't things somehow or other. So I made up my mind to put the nervous energy I had expended in thinking and saying, "I know I can't," into doing the thing. And on the few occasions when I had the strength of mind to stick to my resolutions, I found my difficulties reduced by about one-half.

But the truth that the task brings its strength, the crisis its solution, is one of the last things in life most of us learn thoroughly.

After each hill is safely climbed we may realize it, but by the time the next looms up before us we've probably forgotten.

And the very worst thing of all about this "know-can't" attitude and the suffering it causes, is that quite frequently one doesn't have to.

"Wrinkles," said a great doctor to me, "don't usually come from the amount of trouble and difficulty people have had, but from the amount they've expected."

Did you ever hear the advice that a rather unsympathetic man gave his very searick friend?

It isn't very helpful for searickness but it might be good for the "know-I-can't" malady.

"Don't succumb to grim despair, but remember when you're grim That the hardest things to bear Are the things that never come."

Forty Years Ago

Janesville Daily Gazette, June 11, 1890.—Sport for the Fourth.—The officers of the Janesville Driving Park association having received material encouragement from our citizens, have determined to give two days racing on Monday and Tuesday, July 15 and 16. They will hang up liberal purses to be contested for, and many horses of merit being sure to be here, we can assure our readers they can rely upon witnessing exciting and closely contested races. The officers are determined that racing shall be conducted in an honest and upright manner. There will be an efficient police force on the grounds to see that all persons conduct themselves with decorum and propriety. No spirituous liquors of any kind will be sold on the grounds. On the Fourth, at least, there will no doubt be a crowd from the country there as well as a "big jam" of our citizens.

A Rogue Nabbed.—It will be remembered by the readers of the Gazette that Johnstown was visited by horse thieves who stole several horses, a cutter and other property, and that the depredators were traced to Illinois where they were arrested.

AT THE PLAY HOUSES

Had the general public been admitted to the dress rehearsal of the Elks' big musicals that holds the boards at the Myers theatre this evening, they would appreciate what it means to stage a musical production. They would have enjoyed every minute of the rehearsal just as did many members of the lodge of Elks who sat in the darkened pit of the theatre and watched the gyrations of the musical kings.

When the curtain goes up tonight and the audience witnesses the finished production they will not see the ordinary variety of musicals shown at the Elks. It is a professional twang to the whole affair. There are good fresh jokes for the men (not old hackneyed talk for the boys) and the songs are new and catchy, the chorus well drilled, and the music something to be remembered. It is all due to Professor S. A. Grubbs, who has drilled and staged the show. It is finely costumed, and the electrical effects and scenery were specially designed for the Elks' big show.

A CURE FOR CANCER

If you have a cancer and it is curable, I'll cure it to stay cured and agree to refund every cent of my fees in case of recurrence. I'll furnish you with the very best reference as to my financial stability and personal character. If you care to call and talk it over with me before deciding upon treatment I'll show you what I have accomplished in the cure of cancer during the 19 years of my practice in Janesville. Mrs. Blunk had a cancer upon her nose. It was a serious one and would have caused a great deal of trouble had she not placed herself under my care. The following letter shows her appreciation of my services:

Dr. G. H. Webster, Janesville, Wis.
Dear Doctor: I cheerfully testify to the merits of Dr. Webster's cancer cure, for I have been permanently cured, after having an unsuccessful operation by another doctor. I was losing all hopes when I heard of Dr. Webster. I sincerely recommend him to all sufferers.

MRS. GEO. BLUNK.
Janesville, Wis.

During the treatment there is very little pain or soreness, no cutting. You can attend to your daily work without any interference. Write for a circular.

G. H. Webster, M.D.

McNell, Louis Levy, John C. Nichols, Frank Snyder, Dr. W. B. Merrill, R. H. Van Cleave, Anna Reberg, and George Simpson as end men? Who will fall to laugh when P. L. Myers and Walter Cagle come in as the comedians. Charles Snyder's solo and the solo by George Hatch are worth hearing. Then there is the chorus, which includes Thomas Welch, P. J. Monard, Harry McNamara, William Doherty, F. E. Birch, Warren Skelly, Olin, Muenchow, Bert Schlatter, Drot, Ben Elber, Ronald Ailes, August Pals, P. C. Scoville, John Murphy, R. A. Piller, Charles Myers, Andy Gibson, Laurence Thiele and William Pouchen. There is musical talent enough to fill the bills to suit the most fastidious. Then there is the second part. Professor Du Bois, the celebrated French magician, assisted by George Simpson. Then comes "Jim" Cullen in a new gun-slinging act. Harry McChure as a monologue artist with a new song and the ensemble of the Boix and Balles in an artistic, entrancing dance.

The Janesville Lodge, No. 251, R. P. O. E. presents this assemblage of stars for the kind consideration of the public. Those who attend will enjoy a laugh every minute and those who stay away will regret it. Prof. S. A. Grubbs has worked wonders with the material and the final results are beyond the expectation of the committee of Elks who have charge of the affair.

Ambassador Jean Jussorand.

San Francisco, Cal.—Another national testimony of the friendship of France for America was consummated when Ambassador Jean Jussorand presented the gold medal from France to San Francisco. The medal is commemorative of the city's restoration from the effects of the earthquake and fire, and this act of courtesy on the part of the French government has greatly pleased the citizens of California.

He has been in the diplomatic service of his country for more than 20 years and was minister to Denmark when he was appointed, in 1902, to his present post. He has written historical works and he has received honorary degrees from a number of the

MILTON JUNCTION.

Milton Junction, June 11.—Mrs. Adeline Marsh entertained about twenty of her lady friends at a six o'clock dinner last evening in honor of Miss Cora Kidder. After the dinner was served the evening was spent playing progressive "Sons-R-Set."

The Milton Junction Tigers were defeated by the Milton team at baseball Friday afternoon by a score of 3 to 2.

Fred Gray and wife are up from Detroit for a few days.

G. G. Jones and Miss Cora Kidder were in Chicago Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Cole arrived Monday night from Redfield, S. Dak. They were in Chicago Wednesday.

Mr. Cole reports his business as very good and that they like the western country very much. They expect to stay about two weeks.

The Forester team of the M. W. A. Camp gave a dancing party Thursday evening that was well attended and proved to be the rarest treat in the musical line that was ever held in this village. The music was furnished by the Dues Girl orchestra of Milwaukee. They gave a concert from 8 until 9 o'clock and then the dancing commenced. The hall was fairly well filled with spectators and when the dancing commenced it was quite crowded for a short time.

BUILDING WRECKED; FOUR DIE.

Detroit, June 14.—A roll call of the employees who were in the storehouse of the Pontiac Stove Company when it collapsed showed, according to the company, that four men were missing to-day.

They are Head Shipping Clerk Halten and three foreign laborers, Tom Eagan, a substitute shipping clerk and a laborer were dug from the wreckage badly injured.

Firemen and workmen after rescuing a laborer who for some time lay in a perilous position played down by great beams, are digging into the enormous heap of debris within the walls for the missing four men. The walls of the building remained intact and did not collapse.

Former G. A. R. Chief Dead.

Kountz, enlisted in Company G, Thirty-seventh Ohio volunteer infantry when he was a lad of 15, and was elected commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic in 1884, serving one term.

Schoolbook Bill Unconstitutional.

Springfield, Ill., June 14.—Attorney General Strad, in an opinion sent to Gov. Deneen, declares the Etteleson schoolbook bill passed at the recent session of the legislature, unconstitutional. He declares the measure's provisions would result in an advantage to one class of book buyers in the way of price at the expense of another class of purchasers.

Gas Flow Excites County.

Wooter, O., June 14.—Wayne county is excited over a flow of natural gas running 3,000,000 feet a day by gauge which has been struck on a farm ten miles west of this city.

At the Service of the Poorest.

Science and education do not wait exclusively on the millionaire. They are also at the service of the poorest. So is education, as witness Eliza Hurritt, the blacksmith who learned all languages, and Lincoln, whose masterpieces of prose surpass the orations of the learned.

We Believe in Telling the Truth

We do not believe in knocking our competitors. But sometimes we are forced to correct erroneous statements given out by unscrupulous people to further their own interests.

We own our lands and make farming and land business our specialty. We do our business in the open. We do not stoop to underhanded methods. We rest our whole proposition on your unbiased judgment after you have made a thorough investigation. We invite honest competition.

We have been over every section of land in the Panhandle and know that no land can be sold for less money than we ask at the same distance from railroad and equal value in land.

Amarillo is the largest city in the Panhandle today and that is the reason why land is higher there than in any other part of the Panhandle. This stands to reason.

Our lands at Bovina range from $20.00 to $30.00 per acre. The price depends upon location. The cheapest land lies only 7 miles from town and the best within a mile of the town.

Contrast this with Amarillo where you are promised an automobile ride of from 30 to 40 miles in order to get the land—not at $5.00 an acre less as represented by some, but at from $10.00 to $15.00 per acre more than what we ask you. We know. We live in the Panhandle.

We do not charge you 8 per cent on your payments as some people do, and we do deliver a deed with every sale made which some people can't. Buy your land from a reputable firm and not from scalpers. Every statement we make is backed up by our $500,000 company and verified on the ground. We can refer you to any bank in Chicago, Bovina, or Farwell, Texas. Come down and visit our farms and those of our settlers.

We make the above explanation in good faith and only in order to correct misstatements which cannot be substantiated by parties making them. This we are ready to prove at any time with these parties on the ground. We know where of we speak come with our car Tuesday morning 8 o'clock, N. W. station, or take the 12:45 and come to our office, 174 Dearborn St., ground floor, Chicago. Our car leaves Chicago 6 P. M., June 15th.
